think digital be sustainable

In 2024, the international print industry will once again meet at drupa, the world's leading trade show for printing technology. drupa stands for inspiration, innovation, the first-class knowledge-transfer, and intense networking. drupa is where top international decision makers meet and discuss the latest technological trends and groundbreaking developments.

How do the megatrends of sustainability and digitization influence processes, products, business models, and the future of the industry?

In Düsseldorf, you will find out how the printing and packaging community is shaping the future.

>We know that drupa has always been the benchmark reference for innovation in the graphic arts industry, not only observing but also driving the pulse of the industry. For many years now, drupa has provided the perfect forum for us to showcase our next-generation technology developments for the packaging industry and share our latest integrated software and hardware releases. I'm convinced the industry would not be where it is today without the momentum of the four-yearly global industry gathering that is drupa.<

> As a family business KURZ is very concerned about sustainability. We have invested a lot of time and resources to ensure that the transfer process in finishing is more environmentally friendly and to develop high-quality but also recyclable decorations. This has enabled us to achieve a major progress towards circular economy – an achievement that can advance the entire industry and which we would like to bring further into the market within the scope of drupa 2024.<

Walter Kurz | Vorstand der

stay in the lead explore business opportunities

Sustainability and digitization are having a major impact on the print industry. drupa demonstrates how this influences the further development of cutting-edge technologies and solutions in all areas of print and packaging, as well as future-oriented and cross-sectional technologies.

> We all miss the face-to-face meetings that are also so important in our industry. As a live in-person trade fair, drupa is essential for developing ideas together and driving the industry forward through a productive and creative exchange. I look forward to drupa 2024, when the printing industry will meet again in Düsseldorf.<
