everyday requirements and the practical usability of their solutions,” stresses Marius Berlemann, Managing Director at Messe Düsseldorf. “This makes REHACARE far more than just a product showcase: it is an international marketplace and networking platform for exchange and demand-oriented provision.”

Growing demand for care and inclusion solutions

REHACARE pools the sector’s central developments and challenges – from demographic change and the increasing demand for at-home care to technology innovations. It highlights how solutions for rehabilitation, care, mobility and assistance can contribute to independence, inclusion and needs-based provision. For REHACARE exhibitors this means the demand for practical, reliable and needs-based solutions for rehabilitation, care, mobility, assistance and self-determined living is growing.

Innovations with practical relevance

REHACARE 2026 also provided important impetus in technology terms. Exhibits included solutions from the fields of robotics, exoskeletons, smart mobility, digital care, assistance systems, Artificial Intelligence, adaptive fashion and state-of-the-art provision of assistive devices. The spectrum of innovations made it clear just how much technical developments can contribute to maintaining independence, reducing caregivers’ workload and creating new possibilities for inclusion.

Supporting expert programme and community as strong voices

In 2026 the societal relevance of REHACARE manifested itself in the interplay between the expert programme, community formats and political exchange.

In the community formats content creators, activists as well as persons affected set the tone for the trade fair with their personal views. Hearing from experts like Raúl Krauthausen, Sabrina Lorenz, Moritz Brückner, Tan Caglar and Hülya Marquardt highlight what independent, self-determined living means in everyday life in concrete terms.
